Learn to Play well Together

Creating significant change, solutions, and enhancements for us and those we serve, that will withstand the winds of adversity and the sunlight of criticism involves communicating, connecting and collaborating well with others.

Groups that produce bigger and better futures learn how to play well together.

To play well together each member must make four commitments to the group.

1. P_____ and always doing my part to the best of my ability
2. L_____ through asking clarifying questions
3. A_____ and adjusting with newly acquired knowledge
4. Y_____ to the big picture rather than on myself

If your collaborative endeavor does not already have a deadline, create one. An endeavor without a deadline will never get finished. Your efficiency will increase through the embracing of a deadline.
